

ABSTRACT

A photodetector having a heterojunction structure is described that may operate to reduce contact corrosion and/or reduce dark current while maintaining high x-ray sensitivity. The heterojunction structure may be formed by a plurality of halide semiconductor materials.